The Mansion At
Harkness Memorial State Park

Creating A Lifetime Of Memories
Is In Our Nature.

Eolia

noun

- 1) Island home of Aeolus, Greek God of the winds;
- 2) The elegant mansion at Harkness State Park

Welcome

Eolia, named after the island home of Aeolus, god of the winds, was the elegant summer mansion of the Harkness family.

Harkness Memorial State Park is set on over 230 seaside acres of sweeping lawns and panoramic views of Long Island Sound. Formal gardens overflow with color and gentle shore breezes transport your guests back to an era of beauty and elegance. Enjoy.

During the cocktail hour, guests languidly stroll through restored historical gardens seduced by the scent of flowers and the rainbow palette of colors. Admiring fountains, Oriental sculptures and hidden gardens, guests slowly wind their way back to the Mansion where they dine by candlelight and enjoy intimate conversation as gentle breezes drift through the rooms. As the sun sinks below the horizon in a dramatic burst of pinks and oranges, your guests gather under the tent to continue the magical evening with dancing and celebration.

Dedicated to weddings, celebrations and conferences, Eolia hosts only one event each day. Your event will be a truly unique, special occasion, which will provide memories for a lifetime.

Natural Settings

In 1907, Mary and Edward Harkness had the opportunity to select the most beautiful property along the northeast coast for their summer home. They chose this location for its unequalled beauty. Now, we can offer you the same choice for your wedding day. For ceremonies, we offer a choice of two distinctly different locations that provide breathtaking views of the natural seaside landscape of Long Island Sound.

A more natural setting overlooking sand dunes, beach and rolling waves can be found in our open-air, seaside amphitheater. Located next to a wildlife sanctuary, the sights and sounds of the seashore environment overwhelm the senses. The outdoor experience is unparalleled and your guests will revel in the beauty of nature.

Exchange vows among draping wisteria vines and original Harkness graperies, in the Pergola with covered tearoom. This area, adjacent to the mansion, overlooks a nationally recognized and award winning Italian garden with original sculpture, fountains and pottery. Past the garden, sweeping lawns flow into incomparable views of ocean seascape.

Breakfast Room

A favorite room for all our brides, the Breakfast Room has a beautiful painted ceiling depicting four seasons of floral arrangements. Intricate latticework surrounds three sides of expansive windows overlooking the tent and gardens. It is a spectacular location for the cake and offers a quiet backdrop for coffee and desserts.

Tent and Terrace

The most popular place for cocktails and dancing, this area is often the center for parties. Café tables and chairs are scattered about the terrace and guests dance the night away as the moon reflects off the waters of Long Island Sound. Musicians and DJ's set-up outside and their music is carried through the tent and drifts into the mansion.

Bride's Dressing Room

Secreted away on the second floor, this airy room provides a tranquil place for the bride and her wedding party to get ready for the special day. Dramatic memories are captured as she descends the staircase to meet her groom.

Music Room

The Music Room has a marble fireplace and ceilings that rise 16 feet above a gleaming hardwood floor. The walls are cream colored and the wood trim a neutral hue inspired by the inside of an oyster shell. Guests dine under dimly lit ornate silver sconces. French doors open out onto the Loggia and to the West Garden.

Making Your Event Historical

Edward Steven Harkness and his wife Mary Stillman Harkness were the beneficiaries of a fortune amassed by Mr. Harkness's father, who was a silent partner of John D. Rockefeller in the Standard Oil Company.

During their lifetimes, Mr. and Mrs. Harkness donated an estimated $200 million to various charitable, educational and health-related organizations. In Connecticut, their generosity resulted in buildings at Connecticut College, Yale University and Trinity College. In 1951, the estate was bequeathed to the people of the State of Connecticut.

Today, the estate is managed as a State Park by the Department of Energy & Environmental Protection.

The 42-room Italianate mansion, designed by the New York architectural firm of Lord and Hewlett, was built in 1906 by William and Jesse Stillman Taylor (sister of Mary Stillman Harkness).

The estate was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Harkness in 1907. Architect James Gamble Rogers and his firm designed interior renovations, the Pergola and the Carriage House. The Greenhouses were designed by Lord and Burnham. Eolia was one of six Harkness residences.

James Gamble Rogers' firm designed the layout and pathways of the west garden. Between 1918 and 1929, Beatrix Farrand created a new planting plan for the west garden and designed and installed the East Garden, the Boxwood Parterre and the Alpine Rock Garden. The garden design combines Mrs. Farrand's innovative use of plant materials and textures with Mrs. Harkness' color preferences and extensive collection of Oriental garden statuary.

In 1999, Harkness Memorial State Park received the prestigious Millennium Medallion Award from the American Society of Landscape Architects.

The Sea Welcomes

Harkness Memorial State Park is located where the land meets the sea in historic Mystic Country, Connecticut.

For more than 350 years Mystic Country has been making waves, on and off the waters. Harkness country exudes New England charm. The air is spiced with salt and daring tales of sea life on top of the water with the tall ships at Mystic Seaport— and below at the USS Nautilus & Submarine Force Museum. You and your guests can cozy up to a romantic Bed & Breakfast or up to the tables at two of the world's most exciting gaming resorts – Mohegan Sun and Foxwoods or enjoy one-of-a-kind shops and romantic eateries or world-class entertainment. All are within 30 minutes of Harkness and your dream event.

To ensure the highest level of quality and service, a limited number of select caterers are available to serve your special events. Please feel free to contact any of these preferred vendors to cater your affair.
